WHAT THE FASHIONABLES ARE DOING

Miss Helen Cecil Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson, No. 4471 Washington boulevard, is a debutante whose social entry has been made quietly but none the less surely and satisfetorily. She bids fair to be one of the very popular buds of the winter.

Miss Johnson was a "Mary" girl of '01. and then spent a year at one of the smart New Jersey schools. She has been promiin dozens of little entertainments that have been given since the season opened with Miss Bessie McCann of Lexington, Ky., as central figure. Miss Mccann came to town to visit Miss Johnson, Miss Stella Wade and Miss Adele Armstrong in succession, and many have been the gayeties given for her by these young

After the holidays Miss Johnson will go East for a lengthy visit, probably staying until Lent.

Weddings and news thereof occupy much of the social attention and conversation. This week, on Wednesday, will be a fashionable nuptial event-that of Miss Mildred Hopkins, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hopkins, to Mr. Dudley Harde of Cleveland, O. It will be an afternoon wedding, the ceremony at 4 o'clock, at the Hopkins residence, followed by a small reception. Miss Hopkins has chosen her bridesmalds entirely from the circle of her out-of-town friends, with the one exception of the maid of honor, who is to be ber sister, Miss Lucille Hopkins, Miss Ranney of Cleveland and Miss Robinson of New York are the other two, Mr. Harde will bring all the men from Cleveland, his best man being Mr. Sholes and his groomsmen Messrs. Osborn and Dyer.

Another wedding of the same date. November 18, takes place in Port Huron. Mich., and possesses some interest for St. She Miss Mary Thomson, of that city. is riece of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Rice. No. 3990 Lindell boulevard, and has visit-to skip a season, their erstwhile custom, but are to come back again this winter ed them. The bridegroom in question is but are to come back again this winter Josiah Copley Thaw, the Pittsburg miliging the fore Christmas for a concert and lionaire, and brother of the present Countess of Yarmouth. You may possibly reer that it was this elder brother of the little Countess who quite forcefully voiced his-objections to the Thaw-Yarmouth marriage, and who flatly refused to give the bride away, a position which elder brother and head of the family naturally fell to him.

This marriage of Miss Thomson and Mr. Thaw came about through a meeting of the two at the summer home of the Rices on Saint Clair River, a few miles Port Huron. They met, canced together, and last summer ended with their well will comprise the bridesmaid list. William Caldwell is to assist his brot er as best man, the groomsmen being John McCluney, Linton Block, Thomas, Creigh of Omaha and Will Thomson.

December 2 will bring about the wedding of Miss Alice Orthwein of Portland place Edward R. Heissler of Chicago. Miss Orthwein has arranged a new and most attractive plan for the wedding party, but I have promises not to reveal the details yet. Her younger sister will be maid of honor, and seven little girls will have a place in the bridal procession. Mr. Heissler's best man will be from Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kingsbury Busch have had with them for a fortnight Mr. Busch's sister. Miss Lilly Busch of Washington, Mo., a blonde beauty, who has been the recipient of much social attention and many expressions of admira-tion while here. Kaffee klatches innumerable were given for her after the hos rman custom, while several dinners by Mr. and Mrs. Busch and other Severel whispers of holiday gayety werin the alr last week, preliminary plans for the Yale Glee Club festivities being waft-Louis people, who remember the bride, ed along with others. The club, by the by, had such a superbly good time last year in town that they have decided not the usual day of gladness.

December 22 is the date, so jot that down on your pale-blue, satin-mounted social calendars, ye merrie debutantes and see that no other function nor functions are allowed to interfere. In some mysterious manner the club has learned that this year's crop of buds is singularly sightly and sweet, also numerous, and methinks that this fact may have had

Mr. James Reynolds has willingly shouldered the beary burden of responsibility and is bending his efforts a successful affair. He was leader of the glee club last year, you remember, out got out of college in June, and is in St. Louis now to stay, so has undertaker he somewhat thankless and entirely oner ous duties of resident manager, succeed ing the Messrs, Simmons, who have been occupied so long with Yale. Glee Club con pert managing that they must feel lone some without the burden.

One delightful arrangement connected with the coming concert is an entertainment to be given for the club and a corresponding number of girls at the Samuel Cupples mansion, Mrs. William H. Scud-der to be hostess. It will take place after the concert, of course, and the magnificent halls of the house, upper and lower, and each ninety feet long, will be used for the entertainment, a big staircase landing midway between the two proving an ladmirable station for the crchestra.

It has been many years since Mr. Cupples opened his handsome home for any large entertainment, and the younger portion of society is especially favored to be afforded this opportunity. Mrs. Scudder is interesting herself in the concert also, and there is not a shadow of a doubt that the whole thing will be one of great eclat.

Some afternoon tea or other will given when the boys arrive, as there are several matrons who have sons at Yale, and who will doubtless be delighted to

The Glee Club was rather upset over transportation plans when the Cupples affair was broached, as the last train out of town is close to midnight, and that would give them no time to enjoy this hospitality after the concert. But they have now arranged for a special engine to convey their three private cars to Cincinnati any old time they choose, in the tentedly chat and flirt with the debutantes without fear of being obliged to cut a staircase speech short and run for a train. There are no St. Louis men in the club this year, but I understand some ex-

It begins to look as if the weddings this year would bear away to other cities all our brides. Of the four important puntial events celebrated on last Wednesday every single bridegroom was an out-of-town man, Mr. Gibson, who married Miss Pocock, being from Brooklyn; Mr. Mu-sell, who wedded Miss Turner, being a Chicagoan by birth, though they are to live in the Hawalian Islands for a time; Mr. Stuart, who became the husband of Miss McKeen, hailing from Pittsburg, and Mr. Cockrell, whose marriage to Miss Thoroughman was the fourth in the ilst. being a resident of New Haven, Conn-Of the winter brides Miss Hopkins marries a Cleveland man, Miss Orthwein a Chicago resident; Miss Josephine Walsh an army man who is likely to be stationed anywhere but St. Louis: Miss Saille Walsh Buffalo citizen, and so the list mounts up. Really, it's deplorable, Where, oh, where are our St. Louis swains, and why are they not up and doing?

It always rouses my righteous indignation when a man who likes to assume that he has given much time and thought to the subject, gets up and tries to tell body of women what he knows about feminine affairs.

At least I would be indignant if it were not always so amusing. Doctor Somebody or other, from Chicago, who "talked" before the Wednesday Club last week, took "The Psychology of Dress" as his topic and proceeded to ridicule our sleeves from shoulder seam to cuffs with all the force of his logical mind and his eloquent tongue. He also poked fun at the rapid said-absurd and slavish following of these same changes, and the corresponding mormous expense therewith connected, Dress exponents who speak thusly al-ways forget one very vital, not to say basic, fact: If women's styles did not change and change materially and decoratively, also sizably, the manufacturers vould not make any money. When sleeves grow small, velvet or some expensive fabric comes into fashion and the loss in amount of goods occasioned by the small sleeves is balanced by the creased costliness of the fabric. More weavers of the rich material have to be More wage-earners have more money to spend for the necessities of living. The sequence is as logical and as practical as the learned Doctor Chicago could wish. No man ever should rail at the increase she now trims her frocks with gold fringes and hand embroidery. Why, bless your dear, deluded soul, Doctor Chicago, the fringemakers who flourished twenty-five years ago and who thought they had taught their progeny a lost art, so for-gotten had this form of ornament become until lately, have gotten out looms and cushions that they once used, and, after brushing off the cobwebs, have gone to work on these beautiful trimmings with the result that hundreds of French and American artisans now make a very com-fortable living out of the renewed fashion. It is the same with hand embroidery. Don't talk about things that your philos ophy cannot handle, Doctor Chicago. If I may be permitted, a gentle suggestion, why not discourse on the becominingness of the high slik hat, the beauty of the suspender, the grace of the starched shirt front or the estheticism of the wellcreased trouser? SERENA LAMB. WEDDINGS.
